Experience

Member of the DC and VA Bar

Overview

Although I litigate claims on behalf of owners, general contractors and subcontractors in federal and state courts and before arbitral tribunals, and draft and negotiate architect and construction contracts for developers and owners, I bring a unique skill set to business negotiations and litigation, finding a path to resolve issues and eliminate disputes. As a trained mediator and arbitrator, I pursue sensible solutions to complicated legal issues. Most recently, I specialize in P3 and IPD contracts.

In the public sector, I routinely represent government contractors in claims against the federal government. I also represent contractors and sureties in performance and payment bond disputes and have represented government contractors in False Claims Act cases. Furthermore, I represent government contractors in bid protests and claims at the Boards of Contract Appeals and in the Court of Federal Claims.

Representative Matters

Barbara's trial accomplishments are substantial. Her successes include:

- Winning the largest jury verdict ever in a commercial case in Jackson County, Mississippi, for a subcontractor on a project that involved the dismantling of a fertilizer-manufacturing facility.
- Settling a nine-figure claim for alleged defective windows where the plaintiff had already prevailed in one trial and sought to enforce that judgment in 38 other lawsuits.
- Obtaining a rare summary judgment on behalf of a plaintiff contractor in a default termination case against a subcontractor.
- Securing the first and only case in which the court overturned the Navy contracting officer's non-responsibility determination and directed an award to a contractor before the Todd decisions expanded the Court of Federal Claims' and Boards of Contract Appeals' jurisdiction.
- Settling a bet-the-company case for a subcontractor on a theory of the government's breach of its duty of good faith and fair dealing, where the government revoked acceptance of a hospital communications system.
